If You Are A Privileged Character You Walk Forward Flashing Your Press Card At The Beaming Policeman

Since all the weekly newspapers in California have been granted three day press privileges for one representative each at the United Nations Peace Conference in San Francisco, the Pine Cone felt that it should not just be represented, but represented with distinction, as befits Carmel's traditional newspaper. Hence, it sent a representative who not only is handy at putting words end to end so that they make interesting reading, but also speaks Russian, thus enabling her to understand Molotov in his own language—provided she drew a day when Molotov was among those present, and chose to speak. How fortunate Flavia Flavin was in this respect you shall see.

By Flavia Flavin

Up at seven and down to the newspaper association office by nine. There I waited, along with the rest of the people, for our indispensable press card. While waiting I exchanged remarks with a young man from San Juan who was also beginning his three day stretch. I am sure that we both looked equally bewildered as the pleasant man in charge leaned in a kindly but patronizing fashion over the office counter and explained to us where we were to go, and what to see.

I was the first person to receive a card, and though I should have preferred company, I decided that it would be brave to start off alone. So with an air of great self-confidence, which concealed an equal amount of insecurity, I bade farewell to my San Juan colleague and sallied forth to find the bus depot. This turned out to be in a dark alley back of the Palace Hotel. There I stood by the curb, looking up at a brilliantly blue sky and the warm gold sunlight touching up the ugly buildings. Presently an enormous, comfortable, gray Conference bus rolled up. The good looking, blase young woman in the driver's seat did not even bother to glance at my permit which I waved in her face as I climbed in. A few more people joined us, and we were off to the Conference. As we drove along I observed the desperately jammed local buses and reflected on our contrasting state of luxury, but then the delights of the Civic Center came into view and took my attention. Much of the place is blocked off from automobile and civilian traffic, but if you are a privileged character, you walk forward flashing your press card at the beaming policemen (they have evidently been instructed to beam for the Conference) who all say, "Good morning" to you in the kindliest possible way.

I made straight for the Veterans' Building, pushing past rows of white-helmeted MP's, and right here I want to say that I found them as impressive to look at as some of the more exotic delegates. Having examined the ground floor of the building, I went downstairs to the basement and Press rooms. My first impression of the latter, was about a thousand typewriters —row upon row of them, and a

And What Would You Have Done at That Age If You Had a Stink Bomb To Play With?

Spring fever broke out in an aggravated form at the Carmel High School Tuesday when one group of students locked a teacher out of study hall, another tossed a stink bomb into the girls' dressing room, emptying of its occupants that popular gathering place in record time.

Outstanding event of the day was a fire originating in the waste basket in the school library, which burned about fifty dollars worth of shelves and a number of books not yet evaluated.

"The stink bomb is just an incident in the life of a busy teacher," Superintendent W. K. Bramblett said yesterday, "But the fire is another matter—"

Though he believes the fire was an accident, arising out of a prank that got out of hand, he is not sanguine as to what will happen if the insurance company, that had the policy on the library, chooses to goad the sheriff's office into action against the culprits.

Meanwhile, more citizens than you would believe possible are going around saying the kids should be walloped within an inch of their lives, "To teach them a lesson," and of course they should be, because you can't learn too early in life that you have to pay for your pleasure in one way or another, and when you consider what a refinement of joy, what an epitome of ecstasy it must be to toss a stink bomb through the window of the girls' dressing room and then watch them come boiling out of there, well, it should take the grandfather of all whalings to balance it off. —Wilma Cook

Plans Complete For Memorial Day Program

The Star Spangled Banner sung by Miss Anne Barrows will open the Devendorf Plaza Memorial Day program, according to the program chairman, George Knapp, who is being assisted by Ernest Morehouse, Andy Weimann and Ed Ewig in making the plans.

The American Legion Prayer is to be read by Dr. Frank Topping, and addresses will be made by Mayor P. A. McCreery and a representative of Fort Ord. The traditional taps will be played by a bugler, and Miss Barrows, singing Onward Christian Soldiers, will close the program.

Official invitations have been extended to the Scout organizations, AWVS, Red Cross, Lions Club, American Legion and Auxiliary, and the Business Association, but all of the community is cordially requested to attend the program which begins at 2 o'clock.

Col. G. W. Stuart's Pine Cone Article In Cong. Record

On May 8, the day the surrender of the German forces was formally announced in the House of Representatives, the Honorable Bertrand W. Gearhart of California, ninth district, read into the Congressional Record, Extension of Remarks, Col. G. W. Stuart's article, Military Training—If, which Col. Stuart wrote for the Pine Cone, issue of April 6.

On Pg. A2307 of the Congressional Record of the Proceedings for that day appears the following:

"Mr. Gearhart. Mr. Speaker, because it contains one of the most thrilling stories of heroic sacrifice which only the spirit of do or die in our country's cause could inspire, a thrilling portrayal of a World War No. 1 incident which contains a hard-learned lesson which might well guide us in shaping of our national defense policies of the immediate future, under unanimous consent, I spread upon the pages of the Congressional Record an article from the able pen of Col. G. W. Stuart, United States Army, retired, which first appeared in the Carmel (Calif.) Pine Cone Cymbal of Friday, April 6, 1945, under the significant title of 'Military Training —If.' The article, Mr. Speaker, to which I have just referred is the following:"

And Col. Stuart's article, as it appeared in The Pine Cone is printed in full.

Harrison Library Plans To Build New Wing Out Of $5000 Reserve Fund

Though they have not yet taken formal action, the Harrison Memorial Library Board of Trustees are considering favorably starting work on a new wing for the Carmel Library within the next few months.

Board Member Clayton Neill was instructed by the president, Mrs. Karl G. Rendtorff, to make application for priorities to build, at the regular monthly board meeting at the Rendtorff home Sunday afternoon. The action came following Mr. Neill's report of a contractor's "very rough" estimate of $4200 as cost of building the wing according to plans drawn up prior to the bond election of 1942. The bonds were defeated at the time, and since then, the library has been getting on with makeshift shelves crowding into the reading rooms, with the overflow of books and magazines stored in the basement where they are inaccessable to browsers and where they encroach on the space required for clerical and catalogue work of the library staff, and have long since crowded out the meetings of the library board, according to Librarian Elizabeth Niles and the board members.

The board members expressed belief that they have enough in the reserve fund, which totals about $5000, to build the new wing, but are awaiting exact cost estimates. At Mr. Neill's question as to whether or not it would be advisable to delay building until labor and material costs are lower, "if they ever will be," Miss Niles answered, "I don't know what we'd do for space while we're waiting," and referred to the circulation figures in her monthly report as evidence of the increase in use of the library in the last three years.

Daily average circulation, which was 218 for April in 1943, rose to 241 last month. A total circulation of periodicals and books for the month of April in 1943 was 6555, for April, 1945, 7001.

Comstock-Neikirk Get Priorities For Five Houses

John Neikirk, and Hugh Comstock, Carmel architects and builders, are the first to receive priorities for building rental houses in Carmel, it was learned here yesterday.

They have received permission to construct five Caladobe houses —twenty rental houses are to be allowed in all—and will begin construction of the two bedroom houses out of waterproofed adobe brick within the next thirty days. The houses will rent for $65 a month.

The same firm has received priorities to construct a Caladobe addition to the Bye Ford studio on Monte Verde Street, which has been bought by Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Hatlo for their home.

"A Lot Of Color Is Fiddling" Says O'Shea Whose Black and White Show Opens At Carmel Gallery On June 15

"To be casual in living is to be damned," said John O'Shea, standing back to the grate, hands thrust in his pockets. His weight balanced on the balls of his feet as he seemed about to take off, again to resume a reflective pacing of his studio-living room, set upon the cliffs of Carmel Highlands. More interested in the present tense, he had just made a peremptory dismissal of his past, both personal and artistic and qualified it with the statement one life was essentially very little different from another save in the difference of intensity. He struck out in characteristic forthright vigor at those "lazy and splayfooted" livers who put nothing of enthusiasm or of themselves into the process of existence, who do so little to raise it above the vegetable. Incidentally, Carmel possesses a large share of these; and Pebble Beach— that community tops even Pasadena as a cemetery of the living dead, says O'Shea.

Under pressure, O'Shea admits to being born in Waterford, Ireland, to having come to the United States in his late teens and settled in the great city of Brooklyn. He studied art with a man there—name of Whittier, found Brooklyn "a terrifying place, an empire with all the bridges made expressly and solely for the Brooklynites" and a fine museum that he remembers fondly. It was in 1914 that he came to Carmel; he went away numerous times but always came back. His travels took him to Mexico, the South Seas, and Europe.

Of all the places he liked Mexico best; he liked it for its gaunt, stark personality. White (that coolest and ugliest 'color') worn by men, women in dark green or black rebosas, children that were mere tiny replicas of adults—these appealed. "A lot of color is fiddling," says this master colorist. "Color should be creative, the art which conceals the draftsman technique, as is the case in the work of Degas, for actually nine-tenths of painting is drawing."

And O'Shea has put his theories into practice. He has not only created the many oils with which gallery goers are familiar, but he has amassed an ample and very admirable collection of studies drawn in black, red or in a combination of the two colors upon

THE SCORE

Of a record school election vote of 739, on Friday, May 18, the candidates polled:

L. A. Williams	397
O. W. Irwin	342

The 17 absentee ballots, which will be opened and counted at noon today when the School Board officially canvasses the vote, cannot appreciably affect the outcome, since Mr. Williams' purality is 55, assuring him the election to the Carmel Unified School District Board of Trustees, replacing Hugh Comstock, whose term expires at the next regular meeting of the Board, June 12.

Election officials were H. L. Clement, Florinda C. Holm and Viola Kelsey.

Capt. Williams Wins Silver Star Medal

Capt. Arthur Hamilton Williams, whose wife, Marilyn, lives in Carmel, has been decorated with the Silver Star Medal for gallantry under fire in the Philippine Campaign.

Williams, a survey officer with an artillery unit in the 7th Division, was honored for conducting his surveys in areas infested with Jap snipers. Disregarding personal risk, he accomplished his duties in a manner that was an inspiration to his comrades.

FATHER SERRA ISSUE OF THE PINE CONE

When Monterey celebrates the 175th Anniversary of the landing on its shores of Father Serra, founder of Carmel Mission, the Carmel Mission parish will commemorate the day with Solemn High Military Mass, Father Michael O'Connell announced this week.

The Pine Cone will join in the celebration with a Father Serra Issue, June 1, which will contain pictures and articles about the great religious leader and the history of the mission.

First Mrs. Fraser Opens Monday At The Playhouse

Edward Kuster, production director, and Betty Stevens, stage director, have assembled an interesting and capable cast for The First Mrs. Fraser, opening Monday night at the Playhouse. The men, except for the role played by the producer, are currently in Army or Navy service, and with one exception the feminine half of the cast consists of newcomers to our stage. Enumerating the players in order of appearance, Rosaire Doerflinger, of New York with a considerable record of Gilbert and Sullivan, plays the romantic parlormaid, Mabel. Ninian, younger son in the Fraser family, currently at Oxford, is played by Lieutenant David Neal Berry, stationed at the Presidio; a professional actor of the Broadway stage, he has played with John Gielgud, Judith Anderson and other well known stars. James Fraser, "born in full view of the Isle of Skye", will be portrayed by Edward Kuster, who in the past twenty-five years has had some sixty character roles to his credit in Carmel, San Francisco and Hollywood.

Betty Stevens, whose consummate talent is well known to Carmel, will play the title role herself. The role of Philip Logan, angler extraordinary, lost in perpetual adoration of Janet, is in the skillful hands of Lieutenant Stephen de Baun, stationed at the Presidio, and recently of New York. He has been a writer for NBC and has acted professionally in television; his record in Little Theatre is impressive.

Lieutenant Roland Mulhauser of Atlanta, Georgia, also at the Presidio, will play Murdo, James Fraser's elder son, solid and stuffy: his experience in Little Theatre is both long and wide, for he has been associated with many groups over a long period of years, notably with the Cleveland Playhouse and with the Gilpin Players, the group for whom Langston Hughes has written most of his plays; he himself has written several plays and pageants produced on the Atlantic seaboard. Alice Fraser, Murdo's wife, will be enacted by Gabrielle Kuster, whose characterization of Mary in Carmel's production of The Women is pleasantly remembered. Lastly, the role of Elsie, "James' second", will be played by Elizabeth Paine, who is guaranteed to delight her many local friends with a deft and amusing exhibition of gold-digging as it should be dug. She has a background of Little Theatre at Stanford University and subsequent newspaper work in San Francisco and Carmel.

The backstage crew ("technical staff" to you) of hard-worked volunteers is headed by Rosaire Doerflinger as stage manager. Department heads and their assistants are Ann Clark, Eyre Grigg, Elizabeth Corbett, Marcelle Watters, Marjorie Akridge, Kenneth Kiley and Marcia Kuster.

CHS GOLF TEAM FINISHES THIRD

Carmel High School golfers Dick Nicholas, Ralph Westover, and Bill Rissel came in third in a three way match with Monterey and Pacific Grove.

The Monterey team, apparently greatly superior to its opponents, trampled all opposition and took first place by a considerable margin of points. The Carmel and P.G. squads were more evenly matched, the Grove boys winning over our team by a shade.

MIGHTY SEVENTH

OUR FLAG flies once again over Corregidor. The cost was great in blood and pain, but our fighting men did not turn back. And on Iwo Jima, four thousand men—more and more—died to take the long step forward to Victory. Twenty thousand others suffered wounds. Yes, we're on the way to Tokyo!

At home, your contribution to Victory is measured in dollars. The Seventh War Loan is the biggest in America's history because seven billion dollars must be raised from individuals alone. That means you must buy more and bigger War Bonds.

This is really two great loans in one; for this time last year you had been called upon twice to subscribe in War Loans. As our fighting men raise Old Glory all over the world—let's raise the money back home!

Mrs. Leroy Stewart Represents College At Ship Christening

Mrs. Leroy J. Stewart, wife of Brigadier General Stewart, was honored by being chosen to speak as official representative of her Alma Mater, Winthrop College, South Carolina, at the christening of the S. S. Winthrop Victory at Wilmington, Calif. on May 17. With six other alumni, Mrs. Stewart took part in this launching of one of a series of victory vessels constructed by California Shipbuilding Corporation and named for the pioneer universities and colleges of America.

The vessel, 10,500 tons, and one which can be used for peace-time commerce after its wartime service, took the water at five o'clock in the afternoon after an impressive half hour ceremony, during which time its many restraining cables were burned away at one minute intervals.

Mrs. Stewart returned to Carmel on Friday after her brief stay in Los Angeles.

"A Lot Of Color Is Fiddling" Says O'Shea

what is usually an off-white paper. The medium is chalk, or occasionally charcoal. and the paper is any one of the fine papers he has collected throughout the world. His store includes French, Italian, Dutch, Chinese silk rag papers, enough to last a lifetime.

These drawings of O'Shea, which Carmel is to have the privilege of seeing during a one-man show at the Carmel Art Gallery beginning on June 15—reveal a phase of his workmanship which will be an interesting contrast to his powerfully hued oils that are an outstanding feature of local exhibits, and have been shown in other American cities such as San Francisco, Los Angeles and New York. They deal with carefully selected corners of experience rather than the sweep of cliffs and sea. One is a close-up of the crevices and textures of an aged granite boulder. Abstractly it is fine form; literally taken it brings to the palms of the hands the sensation of touching weather-roughened stone; the mind falls to ruminating upon the inevitable destruction of those relentless cracks worming slowly into the boulder's heart. There are other studies preoccupied with arrangements of stone and weathered trunks, all standing on that balanced point which permits the mind to go over the brink into enjoyment of abstract form or stay within the bounds of representative art. There are portraits also; among them a peasant woman's face stretched broad with a coarse, good humored smile, and pinched at the eyes with the shrewd and bitter experience of her days; another of these that is outstanding is a portrait of a corpulent oriental lost in oily laughter.

His current project is a chronicle of our own coast extending to the mouth of the Sur. Years ago O'Shea spent five days walking over the route, bundled in a heavy Irish overcoat. What he saw then, and on many succeeding trips, has had ample time for maturation. Nevertheless, he does not force the process. He is content to wait for those just right days, when he brings back a trophy.

His present home located on the brink of Wild Cat Cove will eventually fall into the sea, he comments philosophically, but for the present, makes an excellent lookout from which to observe the sea in its every temper and under every light of day or night. Of Spanish design, it has a high ceilinged livingroom, garnished with balcony and iron balustrade. There is also a giant easel, that, with its springs and gadgets, looks suggestive of a device of the inquisition, but the dominant furnishing of the room is a lovely old sixteenth century Florentine buffet. The rugs are fine Mexican and the chairs (rigorous looking Spanish antiques) make excellent props during the heat of picture display. Because John O'Shea is a host of complete graciousness, there is one soft pillowed divan; but this is merely a thoughtful concession to the guest, just as when he finds his small dog shivering in her basket he covers this less hardy creature gently with a blanket. He himself rarely makes use of such luxuries as chairs; and to this dynamic policy Carmel definitely owes a debt of gratitude, for it was under O'Shea's reign as president of the Art Association that the middle and large rooms of the Carmel Art Gallery saw beginning and completion and that its lovely stone court yard came into existence.

Party At Mrs. Fortier's

Members and friends of the Junipero Serra Mothers' Club assembled on Thursday, May 17, at the home of Mrs. George Fortier for nineteen tables of bridge. Play was preceeded by a delicious dessert served by Mrs. Fortier, in the hospitable atmosphere of the living room, which on this occasion was made especially lovely by the floral decorations of calla lilies, stock and other flowers that had been arranged by the hostess. The flower theme extended to the tally cards which were ornamented with miniature bouquets.

Ladies of the club donated the door prizes of the day which were won by Mrs. N. Reimers, Mrs. H. Drew, Mrs. William Willoughby, Mrs. G. Cookson and Mrs. Floyd Smith. Mrs. A. Roman donated a cake which was won by Mrs. Lorin Lacey.

Table hostesses were Mrs. T. F. McKenna, Mrs. Roy Rudolph, Mrs. R. K. Hutson, Mrs. R. J. Belvail, Mrs. J. M. Rigdon, Mrs. R. B. Stoney, Mrs. T. L. Mulligan, Mrs. George Fortier, Mrs. R. E. Mr. Leo Roberts packed forty freshmen picnic-goers into a bus last Saturday morning and neatly delivered them at the swimming hole on the river near Rancho Carmelo for an afternoon of the things people do when they have a picnic lunch and a swimming hole at hand. Mr. Alfred Rico, the students' idea of what a school custodian should be, drove out to join in the fun, which was under the general sponsorship of Miss Evelyn Eaton of the high school faculty, and Mrs. W. N. Gilmore.

Johns-McDade Marriage

The former Miss Dorothy McDade who for the past year has supervised the Carmel High School diningroom, was married last Saturday at four o'clock at the Church of the Wayfarer, to Sgt. Robert Johns in a marriage service performed by Dr. James Crowther. The bride, wearing a street length dress in aqua blue, with hat veiled in pink, carried a bouquet of fragrant pink roses. Adding special beauty to the service was the music played by Miss Eleanor Smith at the organ and sung by Mr. Mackey Swan. The numbers included several lovely Bach chorales and the songs, Where Ere You Walk, (Handel), and Dedication (Franz).

After the service friends gathered at the home of Mrs. R. A. Fletcher, where punch was served as the bride cut the wedding cake. Although the parents of the young people, Rev. and Mrs. Paul McDade of Ogden, Iowa, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Johns of Le Mars, Iowa, could not be present, two class mates of Mrs. Johns at Iowa State were able to attend, Miss Betty Bailey of San Francisco and Mrs. David Frevert of Carmel.

The young people, who met while students at Iowa State, will return to their home sometime this summer, since with the inauguration of the new point system, Sgt. McDade is soon to be released from the Army. He will then complete the final months of his university studies, which were interrupted by army service.

Mary Ann Boyd Engaged

At a cocktail party on Thursday evening, May 17, to which a group of close family friends were invited, the engagement of Miss May Ann Boyd to Lt. A. S. Bowen, Jr., was announced. Both young people are well known to the Peninsula, as Miss Boyd came here to live with her father, Col. Daniel B. Leininger, in '42, while her fiance, son of Col. A. S. Bowen, was born at the Presidio of Monterey. Miss Boyd also received a portion of her education here during the years 1928 to 1936, though the final years of her schooling were taken in El Paso at the College of Mines.

Creating much interest among their friends, the Boyd-Bowen engagement has already been celebrated by Mrs. J. W. Loef, who invited eighteen for cocktails at her home on Saturday evening and by Mrs. Helen Bain who feted the bride with a miscellaneous shower party on Wednesday evening. After an evening of bridge the guests enjoyed strawberry shortcake as feature of the refreshment table which had been beautifully appointed with candles, streamers, and stock in white, laid upon a white lace table cloth.

Making up Mrs. Bain's four tables of bridge were the honoree, Mesdames Ellen Pecca, Beatrice Totten, Thelma Sanders, Luella Orser, Charlene Raney, Beverly Randol, Cynthia Seaborn, Madeline Carpenter, Ruth Orser, Peggy Ball, Billie Winton, Jeanne Hagemeyer, and the Misses Doris Evans and Gordan Olmsted.

League Discusses Legislative Bills

The League of Women Voters is in the best financial and numerical condition throughout the United States that it has ever been in the twenty-five years since it was organized, reported Mrs. Louise Grigsby, president of the Monterey Peninsula League, to the members of the executive board at the meeting the afternoon of May 16. The organization is proving to fill a real need in the study of public questions and the dissemination of information on legislation before the state legislatures and Congress.

Young People Make Credible Showing At Musicial Art Club Student Concert

SOPHIE E. HARPE

A very creditable concert was offered by the Musical Arts Club last Sunday evening in the Music Room of the Carmel High School by a group of young people whose ages fell mostly within the range of 11 to 16 years. These young artists-pupils of our local instructtors in music and the dance put on a program that was a revelation to the large and enthusiastic audience of parents, friends and friends-of-music.

A truly impressive quality remarked by some and the envy of many an older performer in the audience was the unaffected poise and ease with which most of the performers handled their numbers. In a few instances there seemed to be a keen awareness of what they had to offer; but always held well within the realm of good taste.

Gloria Neuman started the program off with a firm rendering of An Artist's Life by Johan Strauss. Bitsie Irvine followed with clearly phrased and carefully played piano solo, the First Movement of Beethoven's Sonata, Opus 2, No. 1. Her Playing of Sequidilla by Albeniz was crisp, spirited and with a good full tone and excelent rhythm. The Carmel High School String Quartet were better than adequate in their two numbers and were especially at home in the playing of Tschaikowsky's beautiful Andante Cantabile with its richness and romantic tonal appeal. (One would have wished for a more careful tuning of the instruments for complete enjoyment.) Donna Lee Paul, although slightly nervous in her first solo, admirably retrieved herself in the playing of Nieman's, In A Chinese City.

Tatiana Srsen showed a mature grasp of piano dynamics and the intention of the composer above and beyond what one would expect from one of her years. Her playing of the Chopin Nocturne, Opus 72, No. 1 was a genuine pleasure to listen to, as well as her interpretation of Manna Zucca's, Valse Brilliante, which she played with verve, rich tonal color and an elastic tempo. She possesses a marked musical style and shows much promise in her chosen field. Lila Grimes sang the ever popular Danny Boy with feeling, and gave evidence of a pleasing natural voice which under progressive training and serious technical study should develop into a very enjoyable one of mezzo- soprano quality.

Many of us who had the pleasure of hearing Robert Jensen sing at the Christmas Party held last year in the Scout House agreed that he has grown in musical stature, under the very able teaching of Rachel Morton, and has a keener perception and better tonal control. His diction in Leoni's Tally-Ho left something for even professionals to shoot at. Joy Wilkenson completely charmed the audience with her demure and charming stage presence and small but well-trained soprano voice. A few more years should take care of the necessary volume. The duet selections sung by Miss Wilkenson and Mr. Jensen, taken from Bittersweet and The Chocolate Soldier, completely won over the audience with the delightful blending of their voices and their naive and ingratiating manner.

The June Delight Dancers gave their usual well rehearsed, beautifully costumed and eye-filling performance. The toe-work seems to get better and better with each successive performance. No student program would seem to be complete without June Delight's usual support and cooperation. She has become one of Carmel's treasured traditions.

A heartfelt 'thank you' should certainly go to Evelyn Nidever Hildebrand for her excellent accompanying. The club would be most remiss were it to neglect to express its sincere appreciation for the way in which the tricky lighting, the moving of piano and props, etc., were handled by very able Douglas Calley and Basil Allaire. Everything clicked with professional speed and finesse! Especially deserving of thanks are the teachers who prepared their pupils for the event and gave so generously of their time and effort: Mrs. Emma Evans, piano; Miss Rachel Morton, voice; Mrs. M. C. Holman, piano; Miss June Delight, dancing.

Of course the avowed function of the Musical Arts Club, at its inception as in its present policy, has always been and will continue to be that of encouraging artist-students as well as the lesser known professional musicians, but with the present concert the policy of arranging suitable public hearings for our musicians has been given an added impetus by this new facet of the club's activities and bids fair to become an eagerly awaited annual event. With the continued help and further cooperation of the music teachers of the Peninsula, the club expects to be in a position to offer bigger and better opportunities with which to encourage our young musicians.

LEAGUE MEET IN SAN JOSE

Conforming to the request of the Office of Defense Transportation, the California League of Women Voters cancelled plans for a state convention this year. Instead, the Executive Board and the presidents of the local leagues, falling within the limit of fifty set by ODT, met in San Jose on Wednesday and Thursday to confirm the election taken by mail of state officers, adopt the budget for the coming year, and plan the program of work for 1945-46. Reports were given at the evening meeting by the delegates to the National Council which met recently in Washington. Mrs. Louise Grigsby attended the meeting in San Jose.

New Shop Opens For Music Lovers

With the doors swinging wide at 10 a.m. Saturday, Margaret Lial's Music Shop in Carmel again welcomes old friends for the first time since early in the war. Records, musical merchandise of every sort, will be found in what was formerly "The Snack", Ocean at Monte Verde.

Her new location has been in the process of decoration and renovation for some weeks—is now bright and inviting with coats of fresh paint and what ever goes to make up the intimate atmosphere of what she intends shall be a Carmel music center for Carmel people.

CONVERSATION PIECE

By Eloise Carwyle

I love roaming about in other centuries. Our own has certainly not been without variety and excitement; but there is a peculiar and very special kind of excitement that follows upon a sudden decision to lay aside this me and slip into another me that is ready and eager for action in some other time and place. Though the me of today is a firm and hopeful advocate of all that purposes establishment of an equitable, harmonious world government, the other me—that traveling soul—delights itself in all contrasts that spring from national differences. It absorbs the spirit of place like a sponge and becomes Scotch in Edinburgh, Italian in Rome or Florence, utterly mediaeval at the court of Queen Eleanor in Aquitaine, and entirely of the 18th century at Streatham Park and in the Rue Belle-Chasse.

Perhaps the great problem of our time is to achieve a certain world-oneness for the benefit and protection of all while retaining distinctions that make going to and fro upon the earth interesting; in short, to preserve variety in unity. The artist often labors for years to accomplish this result. True, he has moments of inspiration, and what comes then needs never to be changed; but there is much else in his composition that may be revised or rearranged more than once. Would it help, I wonder, to assume the attitude of the artist in thinking about this world picture, this world symphony we are trying to create?

The wandering me is impelled by a multitude of remembrances. I go with it for most diverse reasons. Sometimes I go far back to take part in a battle. I am a standard-bearer in the 13th century, and the banner I carry is a glowing thing of rich color and gold embroidery, emblazoned with a device that draws the eye forever upward, a symbol of an idea—an idea we may not consider worthy to-day, but one which inspired men of another time to go forward and face death to maintain it.

Going back to another century—to the year 1683—I make haste that I may be in time to wield a sword for John Sobieski as he meets the Turks at Vienna and saves western Europe from the domination of the Saracens. It is a great thing to have a part in turning the tide of history.

Sometimes I go back to see a pageant. I love the "large effects that troop with majesty." One that is perhaps the most interesting takes place in Florence in 1439 at the inauguration of a great council of church and state, and in the splendid train led by Cosimo de' Medici are the Emperor of the East, John Paleologus and his retinue, Pope Eugenius IV of Rome, prelates and statesmen, learned men of Italy, and Greek scholars of Istanbul and the Levant—an endless procession of the great ones of the earth. I find a place in the Via de' Servi to wait for its coming. All about me is a gay, expectant throng, in holiday mood. A small boy with his dog squirms into a place beside me. He glances up a bit inquiringly, then smiles confidently. We are delighted to find ourselves in complete unity of spirit—he and the dog and I. There is shouting in the distance and we strain forward to see. They are coming now. Already we catch flashes of gold in the sun. With slow, majestic pace the pageant moves, enlarging as it comes until the full magnificence of color in silken robes, heavy with gold, in strangely fashioned headdresses that gleam with jewels, in fluttering banners and gay trappings is spread before us in dazzling array. We are fairly distracted, so much there is to see. On and on they come. We hear the echoing Vivas! when the high dignitaries reach the Duomo. Standing near us is a lad about nineteen. The small boy calls him Benozzo. I observe his rapt attention. He is lost in wonder, caught up in a vision of beauty that exceeds anything he has ever seen before. He will carry the glory of this day in his mind for twenty years and then make the pageant live and move again in fresco on the walls of the Medici chapel.

But the roving me goes back most often just for conversation. Is there anything in the world so delightful as good talk? An idea is tossed up and thought leaps to toy with it, to dangle it, so that light glints from all its facets. It is touched deftly, and again vigorously; considered humorously, or with great profundity. It is to enjoy this special kind of felicity that I journey with eagerness to the court of Urbino in the early 16th century. Here the talk has infinite variety. There is the liveliest concern about all that is happening in that Renaissance world of art and learning and geographical expansion. The witty Emilia Pia and Count Gaspare Pallavacino call a truce in their perpetual sparring when there is a merry demand for their attention to news about the last play put on at the court of the d'Este at Ferrara. Isabella d'Este, Marchesa de Mantua, who has arrived for a visit, saw the performance and lends all her brilliance to a full account of the occasion. There follows a heated discussion of the rival claims of Latin and Italian poetry. It never requires more than a spark to set that subject a-flaming. The lingua vulgare has two distinguished champions in Count Castiglione and Pietro Bembo, the Venetian, both beautiful writers in the Latin; but there is further animated discussion about the extent to which colloquialisms may be introduced into the writing of the Tuscan tongue, and at this point even the champions do not agree.

Sometimes the evening is devoted to music. String quartets are performed, most often those of Josquin de Pres, the renowned Fleming, who is at this time the Duke of Ferrara's choirmaster. One of the ladies may sing Petrarch's verses to the lute, or Josquin de Pres' own setting of Virgil's lament of Dido. And there is general delight when those lovely young things, Margherita Gonzaga and Costanza Fregoso, consent to dance.

An atmosphere of freedom and happiness distinguished the life at Urbino from all other courts in Europe. At that time it was perhaps the most civilized place in the western world. Duke Guidobaldo Montefeltro was a scholar and a man of taste; and the lovely Duchess Elizabeta had that most charming quality of inspiring others to the highest expression of themselves. She was the guiding, governing spirit of all those gatherings. Years later, in a mood of recollection, Castiglione said: "There sprang up in the hearts of all a sense of supreme content each time we entered the presence of the Lady Duchess . . . Nor do I believe that in any other place all the sweetness which flows from dear and cherished companionship was ever tasted as fully as it was here at that time."

Do you wonder that I return very often to that charming circle?

But there are other moments when my mood is for the 18th century, and with rising excitement I make ready to go. Of course I have my hair powdered and dressed in the fashion, and my pastel brocade with the enormous skirt is brought out. I love to wear it. Too much of costume has a depleting effect upon one's sense of person. A mountainous hat can be almost extinguishing; but if head and shoulders are kept free, width of skirt can enlarge the sense of prestige. Borne up by voluminous folds I float into a drawing-room like a ship on the sea, in full sail. Arrayed in my finery I really look quite nice. Dr. Johnson turns a little to look at me as I move forward to greet Mrs. Thrale. You perceive I am at Streatham. It is a great occasion, for Dr. Johnson's portrait, which Sir Joshua has just finished, is to be hung over the mantel in the library. Everyone is here—Reynolds himself, Fanny and Dr. Burney, Mrs. Cibber, Mr. Burke, Goldsmith and Garrick, Mrs. Siddons, Mrs. Montagu, Piozzi, and James Boswell, Esquire, of

APRIL DAY

When I stretch in an April sun,
And breathe into an April wind,
I am as new as six times one,
And as undisciplined.

My pulse beats to the woodfolks' shout,
Their hallelujah holds me tense,
For I know what they talk about,
And every word makes sense.

They, intimate with ground and air,
At large, and free as free can be,
In this mad time of mating bare
Their wild, wild joy to me.

A gladness without mete or bound,
Delirious on foot and wing,
Shocks me till I, loud with the sound,
Am made over in spring.

—Alex R. Schmidt.

JUST BEFORE DAWN

Stand on this soil
And face Polaris—
There to the right
Will leap the sun
Back from the Caspian,
Egypt, Paris,
Red with a day
Not here begun.

There to the left
Will light the ocean,
Dark with the deep
Pacific blue;
Turn of the wind
Will set in motion
Swaying of bough
And swing of dew.

Far to the south
The fierce equator
Flames on the burning
Wheel of dawn,
Holding apart
For earth's creator
Tropic of Cancer,
Capricorn.

Over the north
The Borealis
Lowers its strange
Sidereal fire—
Under the hand
The lily's chalice
Offers its brim
To love's desire.

Cool on the brow
The silver finger
Places the seal
Of timeless things.
Heaven and earth
And white syringa
Shyly respond—
The first bird sings!

A week ago my grandfather and I were sitting down on the steps. Then he called my sister and told her to get the mole poison, because there were two mole tunnels. He put it in the tunnels, then we sat down again. Then we saw my cat carrying a mouse. When our cat let it go it hopped like a rabbit. It was a kangaroo mouse.

When I went over to Dickie's house, we were going down a big hill, when the bearing came out of the wheel, and the wagon went over. Dickie just about broke his neck. Another hill we were going down, the back of the wagon started to come out and we had to get back in place.

Friday Kenneth came to my house. We went to a hill and coasted down it. The bearing came out of the wheel. The wheel came off and the wagon tipped over. We fell out we didn't get hurt. We like to go down the hill. The wheel came off twice. Kenneth just about broke his neck.

THE WAVES

The waves come up—the waves go down,
The waves pound and pound and pound,
They are so big, they scare me half to death,
They are so exciting they take away my breath.

Some rocks are large, some rocks are small,
Some rocks are as tall as a wall,
Some waves break upon the surf,
Then they dance with joy and mirth.

And so I love to watch the sea,
Because it so appeals to me.

—Joyce Morris, Grade 5

HAIRLESS

The neighbor's dog is a fleabitten, hairless mongrel. When he has hair, it's brown and yellow mixed. He's small and very playful. That's how it all happened, by "Hairless" being playful. The neighborhood is full of dogs and they all seem to want to bury their bones in our garden. Hairless came one day for his bone. And just to be mean he dug up all the other dogs' bones. When he finished, the whole yard was full of dirty, smelly bones. Another dog saw what he was doing, and in less than 20 seconds, the yard was full of barking, scrapping dogs. When everything quieted down, the yard was like a cyclone had hit it.

—Barbara Bolton, Grade 7

SAILING

I'd like to go sailing,
Across the wide blue,
To see if things people say are true.
I'd like to travel
And fly back with wings,
I am going sailing across the wide blue.

—Janet Huffman, Grade 5

A POEM

There was a dog named Sandy,
He comes in very handy,
He carries home the food each day,
And runs around when he wants to play,
He behaves very well when you let him out,
He's cute little pup and slightly stout,
That's all I know about that dog named Sandy,
That cute ittle pup that comes in handy.

A NEW RAIN HAT

My father sent us three hats from the Philippine Islands, one each for my two brothers and me. The hats are made entirely of palm leaves and bamboo. They have been woven by hand; no needles were used.

You can trade almost anything with the natives for rugs, rings, bracelets, purses, and small wooden statues.

We look forward eagerly to my father's boxes.

THE JUNGLE

The jungle is so large and scary,
Elephants, monkeys, and tigers are there;
The trees are large or small or rare,
The lions, tigers, and apes so hairy,
The sunlight gleams through the trees like a fairy,
The baby monkeys look so merry,
In the jungle so large and scary.

—Sibyl Kocher, Grade 5.

THE OLD MAN OF THE NILE

There was an old man of the Nile,
Who cried and cried all the while!
Til the people grew sick,
And hit him with a stick,
That boring old man of the Nile!

Delegates Don't Have "Spirit Of Communication"

Mrs. E. R. Hill returned May 15 from San Francisco with a telephone directory that makes the local green-covered creation seem dull indeed, in spite of the "Spirit of Communication" art work. It is entitled "Telephone Directory of the United Nations Conference on International Organizations," and though there are over a dozen pages, and it is considerably taller and wider than the Carmel Directory, there is only one telephone number, International 3300. But does it have extension numbers! One for every delegate and his stenographer, and his sisters and his cousins and his aunts—almost. It is beautifully illustrated on the cover with the seal of the City of San Francisco and the seal of the United States of America State Department.

Mrs. Hill, Carol and Robin were called to San Francisco by the illness of Mrs. Hill's mother. While in the city they had an opportunity to visit with Mr. Hill, who was transferred to San Francisco to install the United Nations Conference switchboard in the St. Francis Hotel.

RED CROSS MEET

A Red Cross conference in Los Gatos called Miss Helen Heavey, chairman, Miss Leslie King and Mrs. James Doud from town this week for three days. The conference opened on Monday.

Reports Still Come In On McGarr And Chaney Activities

Despite the reality of V-E Day, stories are still being despatched by the Army about the men that brought it about. According to the latest of the despatches to the Pine Cone, both Colonel Lionel C. McCarr and Lt. Col. Christopher W. Chaney, who have families here, were figuring strongly in the final push—they and their men of the 30th regiment of the 7th Division. The hospital city of Bad Kissingen they took without a fight, liberating many prisoners, including twenty-five Americans, and when it came to tackling the Main River, they knocked out a self-propelled gun and several heavy guns, as well as patrolling over the river and bringing in several prisoners for the regimental cage, although technically they were listed as a "reserve battalion".

bulletin board around which a great many people seemed to be eagerly crowding, all brandishing pens and pencils. I joined the throng, defending myself with my elbows, while I strove to take note of current events. I read all the orders of the day and announcements of Press conferences. Since I had come in a bit late to make the Polish Press conference, I decided the next best thing would be to help interview the United Serbian Commission, which announced its intention of receiving the press around 11:30 a.m. at the Hotel Governor, corner of Turk and Jones.

Thither I made my way, and arriving early, I sat down in the ugly, dingy-looking hotel lobby and took up my book, a copy of "The Idiot" in Russian. Three Serbs, or they may have been Poles, were also sitting there talking amongst themselves. When I looked at them they carefully drew their chairs closer together and conversed in lowered tones. In a corner of the lobby stood a wilted, dusty palm. The atmosphere of the thing began to please me. I was on the point of losing myself in a world of mystery and imagination, when it occurred to me that it must be time to go upstairs and find my Conference. However, upon arriving at the doorway of a small and again, dingy room, I hesitated at the sight of a group of gentlemen, some of them in their shirtsleeves (let me add that the day was excessively hot) who on perceiving me smilingly waved their hands, crying, "Come in, come in. You are first, but this way you will have a fine seat."

The particular gentleman who took me in charge, proved extremely friendly and anxious to talk. When I mentioned having read Louis Adamic's latest book on Yugoslavia, he declared that he considered it to be "shameful and unkind to the Serbs." "You have been Yugoslavia?" he asked. "I can assure you," he continued very impressively, "that when the Germans fold there will be Civil War throughout the country." Knowing something of the history of Yugoslavia, I cannot say that I was much surprised by this statement.

By this time the room was beginning to fill up with reporters and I was further informed that Louis C. Christopher was the General Chairman of the meeting and was representing the Serbian Eastern Orthodox Diocese for the United States and Canada. Mr. Christopher was a plump, friendly, slightly anxious looking man. In fact, looking back on it, the whole committtee looked a little anxious. They were anti-Tito and anti-Subasich and definitly had an idea to sell.

Now, suddenly and surprisingly for me, we were all invited by the smiling Serb to go into an adjoining room and partake of some alcoholic refreshment. I found myself standing next to a handsome, portly person, most probably an important man. He remarked to me in a knowing way, "This is obviously a definite bid for our favor." "Oh, obviously," I replied, delighted to be spoken to, "don't they call it lobbying?" The gentleman seemed impressed and asked me where I was from. When I said Carmel, he looked vague and his eyes wandered away. Whereupon I inquired of him, in turn, what his position at the Conference might be, he replied very gravely that he was there to represent Mountain View, the name of his paper being something like, "Ways and Means". I very much regret that I did not get this latter quite straight.

We parted now with mutual expressions of esteem, but not before I had consumed two drinks (the day was hot) and was beginning to feel that a press conference was altogether a jolly affair. I nodded across the room to the gentleman from San Juan (these were the only two gentlemen of the press with whom I ever got onto speaking terms) and we all filed back into the other room, where the conference soon got under way. I found that some other reporter had taken my chair and was sitting on my copy of Dostoevsky, so I found a place on the floor along with a good many others.

Mr. Christopher, who was backed up against the radio and seemed to be feeling warmer and warmer, read out a message to the press, which in substance, was an appeal to the United States to help solve the Yugoslav riddle. (There's no doubt as to it's being a riddle!) "The San Francisco conference," he said, as he mopped his brow, "is the last trench of defense for the little peoples of this world." He talked of purges and exterminations of populations. He said, "Serbs must be given freedom." He pleaded for inter-allied intervention and suggested that "a coalition government in its truest sense be established in Yugoslavia under the supervision of an Inter-Allied commission. etc. etc." He was reading too fast for the members of the press who rather resembled rude children in a class room as they called out, "Slower, slower,—repeat, repeat." When it was their turn they got to work with such questions as: "What is Mihailovich's political alignment?" "Are Serbs and Croats alike behind this movement? etc. etc." It soon became evident that the press was departing from it's spirit of reportorial calm and taking sides. Perhaps it always does. Various people flatly declared that they had been lately in Yugoslavia and that certain of Mr. Chirsopher's statements were not true, whereupon Mr. Christopher just as flatly declared that they were true. A pretty blonde woman sitting beside me declared herself to be "a defender of small countries," and at times seemed to be prepared to conduct the discussion on her own. Finally a reporter at the back of the room requested to know the name of the lady who was acting as co-chairman with Mr. Christopher. The latter blew his nose and looked more anxious than ever.

At this point, the discussion becoming involved with an appraisal of the respective merits of Tito and Mihailovich, and showing no signs of breaking up, I, together with a few other weary and enterprising individuals, made a break for the door, leaving the remaining members of the Press, and the Serbs to battle it out. Frankly, I didn't feel very sanguine of a solution to the problems at hand—ever.

Sgt. Hopkins Says Imprisonment In Germany Undramatic

Sgt. Samuel Hopkins is spending a thrity day leave with his mother, Mrs. Elyse Hopkins of Santa Lucia and Casanova streets, after having been released from a German prison camp at the end of March. Sgt. Hopkins characterized his month's experience as a prisoner of war as undramatic—simply dirt and not enough food. He was taken prisoner after six months in European theater where he had served in the 5th Division of Patton's Third Army crossing of the Siegried line. He was close to the Rhine when captured.

The Hopkins family have made their home here since 1936 after coming repeatedly on summer visits from New York. Sgt. Hopkins has been in the Army for the past four years.

Cast Gives Good Account Of Itself At First Theatre

By BETTY HASKELL

"The City of Death", which opened Thursday, May 17, and is now running on Saturday and Sunday nights, is as thrill-packed and action-filled a melodrama as ever roared across the stage of the First Theatre in Monterey. Murder, robbery, a rousing fight, an opium den, and an earth quake run rampant in the course of the evening, and keep the audience breathless with excitement.

Jim Jensen turned in another fine performance in the role of the hero, Ned Stanton, with charming Carmen Mercante playing opposite him as Alice Lester. These two are becoming really polished young actors, giving credibility and genuine veracity to their characterizations. Bob Ruddy was excellent as Willard Deane, the Villian, and Betty Elder played Kate Burgoyne with conviction.

George McElroy as Rush Ryder, "With a Past" and a prison pallor, did a very fine piece of work, demonstrating ability and showmanship. Betty Anne Stanfield as Bess Ryder also turned in a performance of special note, though her part was not a long one.

Don Cornell, and Tommy Stafford both had the difficult task of playing dual roles, and both carried it off with commendable ease, Cornell taking the parts of John Lester and Dennis Donovan, Stafford playing Bill Brady and Inspector Hutton. A particularly good scene was that between Bill Brady and Mag Murphy, played by Bernice Tweedt, while Sammy McGill, as Li Fung Wang, the Chinese keeper of an opium den in San Francisco's Chinatown, was conventionally oriental and a beautiful example of the art of make-up.

"The City of Death" moves almost too swiftly at times, and there are obvious cuts in the script which leave details unexplained and loose ends dangling. There are too many characters who are forced to give swift rehashes of their past affairs, and the whole thing becomes confused, in this involved tangle, which is not particularly aided by the most abrupt ending. However, what the play lacks in continuity, it certainly makes up for in tense excitement.

The various acts in the Olio are tied together by a single theme—a vacation visit to the Peninsula around the turn of the century. Of special note were —"I Gave Her That", the Gold Coast Quartet number; "By the Sea", with Betty Bass and Sammy McGill, the "Movie Thriller", "Wont You be My Honey", and "Cypress Newsjajer," Ken Doolittle added his fine voice to several chorus numbers and had two solos, "Brown October Ale" and "Pale Hands." The Finale "Del Monte" with words and music by Edward C. Hopkins was effective. The settings, designed and painted by Cpl. Howard Neslen and constructed by Dick Johnson were impressive. Rhoda Johnson's costumes were, as always, superlative, and Kay Knudson handled the lighting with admirable skill.

Bundles For Britain To Disband Here

Carmel's branch of Bundles for Britain has been informed by National headquarters the war emergency for clothing donations no longer exists, and final dissolution will occur May 31, 1945, according to Mrs. Elsie Gosling, chairman of the local group.

Friends of Britain who care to, may use this final opporutnity to donate warm clothing or blankets, but please before May 31st, Mrs. Gosling says.

Bundles for America shall carry on as usual at the same location, Dolores Street at Seventh, and will be grateful for donations of clothing to be shipped wherever National headquarters decides the need is greatest.

There is a need for volunteer knitters for American forces as knitting requisitions have been increased.

Bundles for Britain takes this opportunity of thanking all its workers, and the Monterey Peninsula residents for their very generous support during the past five years and hopes its friends will be as generous to Bundles for America.

AAUW Breakfast At Asilomar Sunday

National convention program on the theme, The University Woman's Responsibility in This Time of Crisis, will feature the annual breakfast of the Monterey Peninsula Branch of the American Association of University Women on Sunday morning beginning at 9:30 at Asilomar. The special address will be given by Mrs. Homer Denny of Napa, regional fellowship chairman, speaking on the topic, The Contribution of Fellowships to International Understanding.

The local branch will also elect officers at the meeting Sunday; half the officers are elected each year for a two-year term, the vice-president and treasurer coming up this time for election. Miss Harriet Baker of Pacific Grove is the president, but the membership includes women from the entire peninsula.

Oils, Watercolors, Photos Offer Diversified Fare At Carmel Gallery

By Lee Randolph

Don't fail to see the new exhibit of The Carmel Art Association Gallery on Dolores. Fortunately we have a great variety of tastes when it comes to art—a highly personal matter; and there is no more profitable way to spend a leisure hour, than the easily formed habit of enjoying regularly the changing shows by the artists of this community, which furnish a challenge to our individual faculty for criticism, an opportunity for the pleasant exercise of our personal likes and dislikes and the right of every layman to express his own opinion and by so doing, to make himself responsible for the pleasure or the lack of it, he may derive from contact with the Arts.

The present exhibition, a complete change throughout the gallery, consists of some forty-eight paintings in oil and a group of water colors from the general artist membership, and a collection of lively photographs by Andre da Miano, comprising camera portraits of Hollywood celebrities, animal studies and subjects from his foreign travels.

As usual the oil paintings are sufficiently diversified in approach to stimulate discussion and discovery of individual points of view.

There is space to mention only a few among the artists who consistently contribute to the high quality of these exhibitions. John O'Shea has a beautiful landscape, with broad expanse of luminous sky and rolling country, easily recognized by his characteristic simplification of material and decorative design. One always enjoys the low toned harmonies of George Seideneck's sensitive painting, which in this instance has for its subject the beauty of Venice. Several canvasses by A. B. Warshawsky, one of which, "Garden", is a scintillating expression of sunlight, recall the luminous quality of Monet. An outstanding example of Clifton Williams' convincing winter landscapes is a unique vision of gleaming snow banks hanging over clear cold water.

Invariably one looks for Maxine Albro, this time represented by a whimsical design of a little half nude lady sitting under two enormous leaves playing a guitar. There should be more such delightful fantasy in painting.

Other arresting canvasses are: "Still Life" by Marjorie Doolittle, a sensitive semi-abstract composition in liquid blue, green and purple; Martin Baer's two exquisite little girl heads and fantasy of flowers and figures; "Venice" by W. P. Silva, and Frank Myer's sunlit sea and rocks. Tibby Hofman sends "No Oranges"; well, they are not missed, since the startling realism of the other homely objects, dominated by a little African sculpture, gets on very well without them. There is a solidly painted little nude by Richard Lofton, in monotone of reds and browns. Marjorie Pegram has a painter like still life, (with oranges) and Doo Virtin, an Italian lady on a couch. The Gallery would miss the characteristic Carmel landscapes of M. De Neal Morgan.

Portraiture, that difficult art, is ably presented by Howard Smith and Edward Timmons, and one remarks the vivid lighting in W. K. Fisher's portrait of Mrs. Elsie Martinez. Edward Graham, whose distinguished one man show of abstractions in water color will be remembered, sends two decorative panels in oil.

Outstanding in the water color show are "Seri Indian Fishermen" by W. C. Watts, a charming landscape by Nancy Johnson, Phil Nesbitt's amusing and decorative "Chinese Parade", a fine flower study by Henrietta Shore, the intriguing fantasy called "The Dance" by Sophie Harpe, and brilliant contributions to this section by John O'Shea, Maxine Albro and others.

It should be remembered that few communities of commensurate size in the United States can maintain a gallery of equal quality. Carmel may be justly proud of its artists.

Conversation Piece

Auchinleck. And more besides. But these are the intimates of the house.

The atmosphere is spirited. These men and women approach the evening as an actor does his play. Conversation is the order of entertainment and they consider it a fine art and have devoted thought to its development. The talk is often wise, but not heavy; it never fails to sparkle.

Mr. Garrick tells me that Thomas Gray has written a new ode and his good friend Horace Walpole has printed it. I have been hearing about the press that Walpole has installed at Strawberry Hill and my interest is keen. Mr. Burke adds that Walpole has departed for another of his peregrinations on the continent and I am delighted to hear it, for I go myself to Paris within a fortnight and shall be certain to meet him at Mme. du Deffand's salon. I am always much entertained by his account of doings at Strawberry Hill, and the printing press will provide a fascinating new topic. And it is very possible I shall meet there also that charmingly eccentric colonial, Dr. Benjamin Franklin. He, they tell me, knows much about printing.

At Mme. du Deffand's gather the aristocratic and literary celebrities of every European nationality, and all currents of thought flow into the stream of talk. An evening there is an exhilarating experience. But it is to another salon that I go more often, the little white and gold and crimson salon of Julie de Lespinasse in the Rue Belle-Chasse. Here are served no suppers, as at Mme. du Deffand's; no dinner, as at Mme. Geoffrin's. There is only talk. No one comes here because it is the smart thing to do, to display learning, to be lionized, nor to meet celebrities; they come to satisfy a need for intellectual sympathy, to expand in the atmosphere of understanding and encouragement. Julie had a lovely mind. Brilliant herself, but never caustic, never aggressive nor dominating, always interested, she was the delight and inspiration of men of intellect and talent. Those who frequented her salon, both men and women, held her in the dearest personal affection. Nowhere was society more distinguished nor conversation more animated. The latest ideas of every sort were discussed. Fine ladies, soldiers, poets, statesmen, clergymen, and scholars were eager to gather around her. She was of those who possess that precious art of bringing out the finest intelligence of others. And it is to her salon that I return again and again with undiminished joy.

It was said of another saloniere, Ninon de l'Enclos, that her idea of heaven was a place where one talks endlessly with one's friends. And sometimes I think I agree with Ninon.

THE MALE HORMONE
By Paul De Kruif
This book is elaborately documented with numerous case histories, dramatic, touching, and humorous. The organic chemists who for so long toiled amid fumes of ether and danger of explosions, on a quest which everybody else scorned — these hormone hunters are shown by Paul de Kruif as a new breed of men against death, fighting not physical demise but the far sadder living death of premature old age. 2.50

THE BRICK FOXHOLE

"THE BRICK FOXHOLE is the best book so far published during the war, dealing with the bitter frustration of the men in uniform who never left our shores. It is a cross-section of the people of our society, it's not always pleasant; it's always exciting. The book has great power." 2.50

"Bless the Lord, O my soul. O Lord my God, thou art very great; thou art clothed with honour and majesty," (Psalms 104:1). This is the Golden Text for the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon on "Soul and Body" for Sunday, May 27.

Included in the sermon is this verse from I Corinthians: "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?" (6:19); and the correlative passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "As astronomy reverses the human perception of the movement of the solar system, so Christian Science reverses the seeming relation of Soul and body and makes body tributary to mind," (p. 119).

Maj. H. L. Topping Awarded Silver Star For Gallantry

Major Howard L. Topping, whose wife and daughter, Laura-Lee, live in Carmel, has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action, it was learned here this week.

According to the War Department dispatch, "During the 28th's Hurtgen Forest battle, Major Topping, then commanding officer of the 3rd Battalion, 109th Infantry, was assigned the mission of moving his battalion from the vicinity of Germeter, Germany, to a position about two miles away. His troops were given the task of defending a road and heavily wooded draw from enemy infiltration which would prevent the remnants of a besieged friendly battalion from withdrawing from an untenable position on high ground beyond.

"With a small reconnaissance party Major Topping moved out at the head of his battalion. The nearest route to his destination led across an open field under enemy artillery fire, but as time was precious he traversed the route, completely disregarding the danger involved.

During the trip the party was twice fired upon by German artillery. Reaching the woods on the opposite side of the field near his objective, Major Topping observed a five-man enemy patrol moving toward him. When they were about 100 yards away he opened fire on the enemy with his M-1 rifle, mortally wounding two of them.

"Continuing to his objective he observed another enemy patrol about 200 yards away. Again opening fire, he killed one of them and forced the other to flee. In spite of an enemy mortar barrage, he remained at his position until he was thoroughly familiar with the ground he was to occupy.

"When he was about to leave, an enemy sniper from across the draw shot him through the left wrist. He returned to his battalion but refused to be evacuated until after he had led his men to their positions. His action permitted the remnants of the besieged friendly battalion safely to withdraw.

"A graduate of Stanford University, Major Topping enlisted in the Army as a private three and one-half years ago, attended Officers Candidate School at Ft. Benning for his commission, then was assigned to the 28th.

"At Camp Gordon Johnston, Fla., the major, who is 6 feet 3 inches tall and weighs well over 200 pounds, instructed soldiers of the 28th in Judo and hand-to-hand fighting. Later he became aide-de-camp to the division's commander, Major General Lloyd D. Brown, before his assignment in France to a rifle company as commanding officer.

"Besides the Silver Star Major Topping wears the Purple Heart."

Lest we forget!

Now that the war is over for Germany, many in this country may feel that it is also over for us...that we can now let down, and relax.

Nothing could please Japan more. Nothing would hew so closely to her propaganda line.

We westerners understand this danger perhaps more than others. We may remember Pearl Harbor more clearly. And Bataan, Guadalcanal, Tarawa...

With the war over in Europe, the West will now become the great "marshalling yards" for the final Big Push against Japan. An enormous tide of troops and war materials undoubtedly will pour through to our seaports. Western railroads, housing, food supplies and shipping will be strained with the full weight of the nation's fighting effort.

We say this because—as far as the western railroads are concerned—many civilians may expect victory in Europe to mean better transportation service here. Actually, it may mean less room for civilians on the trains.

When the full tide of war traffic comes, we shall call on every resource to handle it. We shall run the war trains through.

First things come first until this war is over—and it isn't over yet.

With Katie Martin

Well-known for her sculpture, Kisa Beeck, Berkeley sculptress, also does some delightfully humorous and whimsical "pin-up pups" as she calls them. These are sketches in black of pups and bears with a gay and colourful background, believe it or not, on a sheet of newspaper! The results are very clever and effective, making bright decors for modern homes and studios. If you haven't already seen the pin-up pups, you may catch a glimpse of them on the walls of THE DISCOVERY SHOP . . . some in red, others in green, blue, yellow and purple. The size of the actual picture runs approximately 15" x 20", and framed, one should allow an additional three inches for the mat.

One of the prettiest dresses I have ever seen has arrived at THE COUNTRY SHOP. It is a lovely Oxford crepe with alternating bands of soft grey and then another of dark green leaves, light green leaves, white flowers and tiny red buds set horizontally . . . the neck is square and the waist band is dark green grosgrain ribbon with a small bouquet of the colours in the tiny buds. It is adorable! Also there is a stunning frock of beautiful white imported English waffle pique . . . simply cut but exquisitely set around the shoulder and neck line wiith heavy eyelet embroidery, repeated at the base of the peplum . . . and small bell sleeves covering the shoulder. A new blouse is in too . . ."going to the dogs the stylish way" since the motif printed on Oxford crepe consists of various dog's heads. Nice round high narrow collar tying at the neck long sleeved, the blouse comes in aqua, in lime and in yellow. Very smart with tailored suits.

And for Graduation gifts, ones that a girl will always remember, MERLE'S TREASURE CHEST offers beautiful birthstone rings, bracelets set with semi-precious stones, charm and bangle bracelets which are more popular than ever, and all the nice costume jewelry and pins that she could wish for . . . Especially desirable now are the combs set with sequins and beads, with pearls, and with sterling silver tops . . . also some gold decorated ones, plain or fancy. With the newly attained dignity of graduation, earrings will be quite appropriate too, and Merle's has many kinds for all manner of wear. Also there are lucite compacts and leather compacts for older girls with matching cigarette cases . . . very chic.

Some very charming pinafores in two wonderful styles may be found at MAXINE'S . . . pretty peasant types in gabardine with embroidered braid decorated with tiny flowers . . . two pockets . . . handsomely made. The colour combinations are marvelous: pale pink with blue trimming, aqua with red, lime with brown, navy with red, yellow with brown, and maize with green. They are all perfect for Carmel days when you want to look especially attractive! And just right for summer evenings when those informal graduation dances roll around.

Silver jewelry of practically all kinds may be found at the JOYCE Shop next door to Staniford's on Ocean Avenue. Special features to mention are the beautiful bracelet, ring and pin sets with amethyst quartz, and Mexican jade, and Mexican onyx. Link bracelets and identification bracelets make grand gifts always, and the ever-popular barrettes and combs studded with silver beads too. And in the earring line are so many different designs I can mention but a few at this time: a sweet pair of silver roses, large silver flat beads, pearls, and some small gold-plated ones shaped like bows and set with coloured stones . . . also some darling little gold-plated ones in the shape of clusters with green and white, or red and white tiny stones.

For more personal gifts, THE SILVER THIMBLE has the finest! Dainty lingerie, soft lovely robes and house coats, and night gowns. In the house coats there is a smooth jersey for warmer days: in luscious shades of blue, aqua, black, and yellow, this one has a double row of ruffles at the sleeve and down the front lending the dainty touch of feminine glamour so dear to the heart of a lass. Other gift suggestions are the envelope - shaped saddle leather purses, crocheted corde handbags, and many leather belts. The belt line is really superb now, and has a new addition which is really cunning: the "Debutante" which has two hands as clasps . . . in sleek leather, the colours are white, green, and yellow.

Close Season

The North Circle of the Church of the Wayfarer met on May 15 at the home of Mrs. Harvey Braunton to close its year's activities with an election of officers for the new season. The leader for next fall will be Mrs. Mark Penoyer, while the secretary-treasurer's post will be held by Mrs. Ramsey Benson. The program centered about Mrs. Harry Beck's concluding review of West of the Dateline, the group study book. Mrs. Penoyer led devotions.

The South Circle met at the same time at the home of Miss L. Lucile Turner on Mission Street. Theme of the devotions was peace and brotherhood, featured by St. Francis' prayer for peace, read by Mrs. D. E. Nixon. Miss Etta Paul gave a review of the book, Mischi Kawai, the autobiography of a Japanese YWCA worker who for the past few years has had a girls' school in Tokyo where Christian principles and occidentals ideals are included in the curriculum. Her account of how her family turned to Christianity and of her education in Mission schools and then at Bryn Maur in this country and by travel in Europe gives an enlightening picture.

Electing officers for the coming year, the circle chose Mrs. J. E. Southwell as chairman and Mrs. W. W.Allen, secretary-treasurer. The group voted to continue the study next year of books issued by the Missionary Education Movement, which are used throughout this country and Canada. At the close of the program the hostess served tea and cookies.

LOTSA LICENSES—FEW FISH

According to Lloyd Lemon, local dispenser of fishing licenses, twenty-five per cent more people have been bitten by the bug than ever before—and that does not include servicemen, who may fish license free. Unfortunately, this heavy call for fishing licenses coincides with water which is lower than usual, and fish which are proportionately smaller, and may even mean a rather serious drain upon the streams, Mr. Lemon comments.

LT. PACE SPEAKER

At the regular Tuesday evening dinner of the Lions Club held at Whitney's, Lt. John Pace was introduced by Dr. Robert Hopkins to speak to the assembled members on the problems anticipated in the occupation of the China coast.

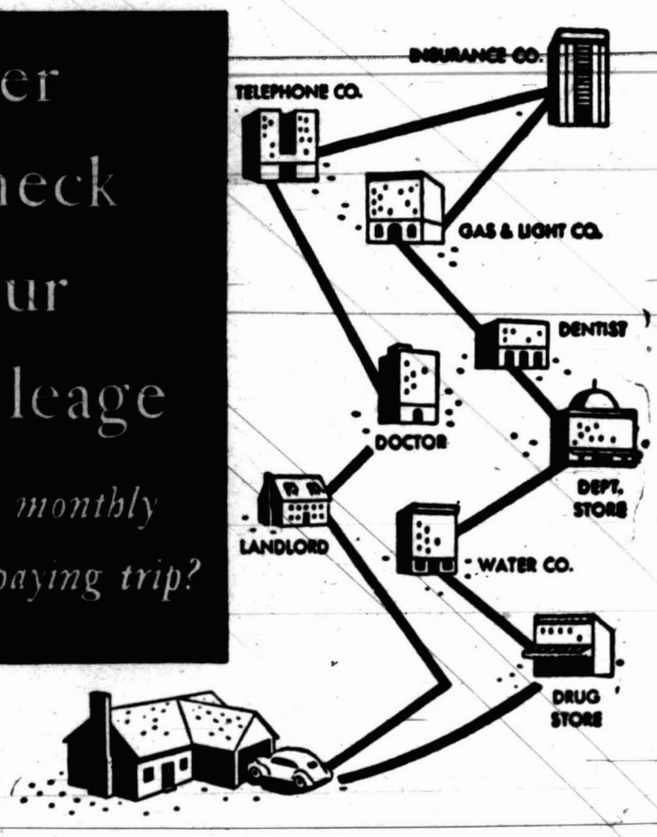

Members voted to turn out en masse for the Cub baseball game scheduled for today at four o'clock at the high school field. Guest of the evening was Sgt. Gordon Ayres.
